

Abstract

An individually drivable array of single stripe laser diodes is proposed for imaging printing plates. An imaging optics is used to produce  $n$  image points which have a spatial interval  $l$  between adjacent points. An interleaving raster scan line method is indicated, which, given proper selection of the increment, enables each dot to be exposed exactly once.

09879609.061201